A BRICK-BAT FOR MR. RICHARD "BONFIRE" BENNETT

Elsewhere on this page the Observer quotes an article from The Financial Post, in which the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett is taken to task, the purport of the whole article being that Mr. Bennett is considerably better equipped with grandiose phrases than he is with good, businesslike common sense. Mr. Bennett is thus wounded in the house of his friends, for The Financial Post, ostensibly devoted to financial matters, is strongly Tory in its editorial outlook.

But those who have followed Mr. Bennett's career closely are not at all surprised at his failure to deliver the goods. Despite his acknowledged ability and undoubted sincerity, he has never actually accomplished much in a public sense. Turn your memories back to 1904 and 1905, when the formation of the western provinces, Saskatchewan and Alberta, was in process. The Autonomy Acts were drafted. Mr. Bennett took violent exception to them. He went to Ontario to rouse the people of that province against the Acts. He prophesied, with great wealth of detail, that if these Acts were passed, the people of the West would rise in rebellion. Well; twenty-six years have elapsed and Mr. Bennett's rebellion hasn't come off yet. Even J. J. Maloney can stage a better revolution than Mr. Bennett.

Later on, Mr. Bennett entered the provincial legislature. Here he accomplished the apparently difficult task of splitting the Grits, this being done by his heavy and unproved charges against the Rutherford-Cross government over the Waterways trouble. But he did not profit by it, the people of the province failing to heed his clarion call. In disgust, he left the legislature and never attempted to return to it.

In 1917, he was in the Borden cabinet as Director of National Service. In that capacity, his sole visible work consisted in sending out some millions of "Registration Cards" we all had to fill out dutifully for some inexplicable reason. In due course the cards were returned to Ottawa. Nobody ever heard anything of them since. It was a grand gesture, but of what practical use has been the great military secret, and had the Germans got hold of it, the whole course of the war might have changed; who knows?

In 1930, Mr. Bennett became Prime Minister, boosted to that eminence by a flock of businessmen which have been coming home to roost ever since. Unemployment, to be cured within three days, is still with us. No new markets have been "blasted" open for Canadian produce, the attempt to blast being succinctly described as "humbug." (Produce prices are lower today than they have been in decades. Governmental expenses have mounted alarmingly. The people are being taxed into oblivion, with more taxes yet to come. Here, indeed, Mr. Bennett has accomplished something that not even he has promised, hoped for and expected.

This is just a brief sketch of his activities. Is it any wonder that the Bennett myth is being subjected to criticism, even by those from whom his main support was derived?—Vegreville Observer.

CRAZY SPENDING BRINGS HIGH TAXES

Here in Alberta farm lands occasionally fall to the Province or to the municipality for unpaid taxes, but in the better areas such cases are rare. The reason is that Alberta's land taxes are yet very small. School municipal and provincial taxes upon a quarter section do not weigh heavily in most instances.

Alberta farmers, though they sometimes grumble about the taxes on their land, should be glad they do not live in Michigan. During the boom years in that State, land taxes were boosted sky high. Starting about 1915, the demand for better roads led to a tremendous amount of spending much in an investigation recently the New York Times learned some startling facts. Instances of high taxes on farm lands, gathered by the Times, follow:

There was a thirteen-acre farm valued at $1100 upon which the road tax levied last year was $740; there is a 30-acre farm for which a man and his wife struggled for many years. Finally it was free of debt, but then the man died. His widow was dependent upon the rent from the farm. The assessed valuation of the place $5,000, and $1423 has been levied upon it in tax payments. There are past few years, a sum the widow cannot pay. There is a 70-year-old couple who for 40 years supported themselves on a small truck farm valued at $5100. Their total tax last year was $856, which they can't pay. There is another farm in Macomb County whose road tax last year amounted to $24,000. There are 40 acres in Oakland County with $65,000 tax delinquencies, not all of which are paid. It is true, that the delinquency due to the fact that farmers cannot pay such taxes, not the counties hope to recover the delinquencies by tax sales.

Alberta wants better highways, but we do not want them at the expense of such burdens upon the people on the land.—Lethbridge Herald.

PROPOSED AMALGAMATION OF CANADIAN RAILWAYS

The Wall Street Journal published prominently in its issue of January 4, under the heading "Canada Likely to Buy Railways," a dispatch from Montreal, an extract from which is:

"Serious consideration is being given in influential political circles to proposals for railroad unification. A plan that has wide support would provide for a joint management of both the railway and the lands and debentures of both railroads, as well as the preferred stock of the Canadian Pacific, would be guaranteed."

Appoint New Heads to C.P.R. Departments

Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraphs Department has with the New Year changed in name to the Department of Communications having supervision over the telegraph, telephone and radio broadcasting services of the railway. To the head of the new department Mr. W. D. Neil is appointed as general manager, vice Mr. John McMillan, retired, and Mr. H. H. Goodfellow, taken the position of assistant general manager.

Mr. T. Fawcett is promoted manager of Telephones in the West until March 1915 and Mr. A. A. Goodchild is promoted manager of Telegraphs in the West until March 1915. Mr. Fawcett has been in the West since 1911 and Mr. Goodchild has been in the West since 1911. Mr. Fawcett is a former general storekeeper of the Canadian Pacific Railway and has been in the West since 1911. Mr. Goodchild is a former general storekeeper of the Canadian Pacific Railway and has been in the West since 1911.

Mr. Neil joined the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway as an operator at Calgary in 1905, rising from the ranks to the highest post in the gift of his department. His first ten years of service were spent in the West and in 1915 he came as superintendent of traffic to Montreal. In 1922 he became assistant manager eastern lines and in 1924 assistant manager western lines. Since 1930 he has been assistant general manager of the department.

Mr. McMillan became a construction engineer with the Canadian Pacific in 1933 and passed through various grades of promotion in the West until March 1915 when he was promoted manager of Telephones in the West until March 1915. Mr. Fawcett is a former general storekeeper of the Canadian Pacific Railway and has been in the West since 1911. Mr. Goodchild is a former general storekeeper of the Canadian Pacific Railway and has been in the West since 1911.

led, or virtually so, by the government. The common stock of Canadian Pacific would be assured of a stated dividend, perhaps 4 per cent, or 5 per cent, (the present rate) with provision for increase to the old rate of 10 per cent as earnings justified. Surplus earnings would be used to finance equipment purchases and to repay to the Government advances made to the Canadian National.

"In effect, the transportation system of Canada would be operated as a unit, with close supervision by the Government. It is claimed that such a plan would result in a cut of at least 20 per cent in railroad operating expenses."

"On a basis of results shown by the two railroads in 1928, their best year, operations under a unified system such as proposed would have meant that, after dividends at rate of 10 per cent on Canadian Pacific common stock, some $30,000,000 could have been turned over to the Federal treasury. On basis of 1930 operations, net payment to the Government would have exceeded $35,000,000."

FORD EXPERIMENT OF VILLAGE REHABILITATION

The Ford Motor Co. has taken over a little village near the factory, and is experimenting in placing the inhabitants en masse in a state of independence.

Conditions are ideal for the experiment. The village has about 500 families, all deeply in debt, and living far ahead of their ability. The Ford Co. has taken the heads of these families out of the $6 a day group and given them work at 12 1/2 cents an hour. One dollar a day is what is considered actually necessary to feed the families, and goods are sold at practically wholesale prices. Meanwhile the company will O.K. all outstanding accounts, electric, gas, installment payments, and run their own stores. For supplies I.O.U.s are accepted. There are no banks. Nothing is given free. The debt problem is a heavy centre of attack. There were homes with electric washing machines and no floor; with waffle irons and no butter; with vacuum cleaners and no rugs.

One family bought an "easy term" washing machine because a turkey was given free with each machine purchased.

The whole financing is taken over by the company, and these families given just such money as is needed for day to day necessities. It is hoped eventually to get all the debts paid off and start them afresh.

SASKATCHEWAN TO BUY 1,500,000 BUSHEL ALBERTA OATS

"The Saskatchewan Seed Purchasing Commission has come to Alberta to purchase seed oats and will require up to 1,500,000 bushels," announced G. M. Stewart, district inspector, Dominion Seed Branch, Calgary, Saturday.

The reason that it has come to Alberta, said Mr. Stewart, is on account of the exceptionally high quality of the seed in this province. All seed must be shipped under the certificate of the Dominion Seed Branch.

JABEZ'S CORNERS

Alberta Hunt was 22 when she graduated from college, and having by that time reached the end of her finances she at once applied for a school. A week later she received notice from the agency that a teacher was wanted at Jabez's Corners, and as there was not likely to be another opportunity, she, lively, and anxious for a position, that she take it.

Alberta burst into merry laughter when she finished reading the letter. "Jabez's Corners!" she chided. "I can fancy just what the place looks like! A small schoolhouse built on the classic lines of a packing box, sadly in need of paint; another packing box across the way also in need of paint—truly a delightful prospect!"

Urban life was the only worthwhile existence to Alberta, but "needs must," so she accepted the school. Truth to say, however, it was a very spiritless young woman that packed her trunk a few days later and departed for Jabez's Corners.

According to directions she left her trunk at Westville; from there it was a fifteen-mile ride by trolley. Arriving at her destination it was dark, but a small boy was waiting and the moment she alighted, he asked, "Are you the new teacher?"

Alberta replied that she was, and he introduced her to the school. "Welcome," and escorted her to the Wallace home, where she had arranged to board.

Upon meeting her hostess Alberta was agreeably surprised: Mrs. Wallace was a bright, bustling woman, evidently an excellent cook. If the delicious odor wafted to her as she entered the house was evidence.

A surprising discovery made by Alberta was that Jabez's Corners was far from ugly and not in need of paint. Frequently when tasks for the day were finished she would stroll the length of the long, winding thoroughfare that was the village's main artery, climb Crescent hill and gaze with delight on the surrounding landscape.

On a Saturday evening several weeks after her arrival Alberta was in the kitchen assisting Mrs. Wallace with the supper dishes; Mrs. Wallace was saying, "It certainly is a feather in your cap, Miss Hunt, that you have succeeded in getting the upper hand of Tom Acher's, the teacher in all the mischief. The other teachers were never able to do anything with Tom."

"I think my troubles with him are over," remarked Alberta. "I'm convinced they are!" agreed Mrs. Wallace, "and all because you've made friends with Tom! The other teachers were forever picking quarrels with him. That's the secret of your success! I hope you've decided to remain at the Corners; I'm going to find a husband for you if there is no other way of inducing you to remain."

"I wasn't out for farm life," she was interrupted by some one entering the kitchen.

"Why, Ben!" ejaculated Mrs. Wallace, "when did you return?"

"This morning," Mrs. Wallace introduced the young man to Alberta as "Mr. Lewis of Wonderful Farm, over on South Street."

Of all surprises that Jabez's Corners afforded, Ben Lewis was the greatest. Young, handsome, college-bred, he had come to the Corners to take up chicken farming because he thoroughly enjoyed the place. When later Alberta in company with Mrs. Wallace visited Wonderful Farm and beheld the flocks of snowy white Leghorns and listened to their owner discoursing on his hobby, she was compelled to acknowledge that farming under such conditions might be alluring.

The school year passed all too quickly; almost before Alberta realized it vacation time arrived. The day before she was to leave Jabez's Corners she climbed Crescent hill to take a farewell look at her favorite view. Seated on a huge boulder at the roadside, she was gazing pensively across the valley, when the "chug, chug, chug," of a motor car laboring up the steep ascent, roused her from her reverie. Presently some one called out, "Hello!" the car stopped and out jumped Ben Lewis.

"I'm taking a farewell view of this lovely landscape," remarked Alberta, as Ben sat down on the boulder beside her.

"You'll be glad to return to the city,"

"Why, er, yes I suppose so."

"I remember hearing you say when I first met you that you were not cut out for farm life," Ben looked serious.

"Did I say that?" cried Alberta. "Jabez's Corners has taught me a lot of things!—"

"Alberta!" cried Ben, hopefully, "do you think you could be happy as a farmer's wife if that farmer—"

"Why, I'd love to feed chickens if only knew how!" exclaimed Alberta archly.

"Come," cried Ben, jumping up and assisting Alberta, "your first lesson will begin in exactly ten minutes!"

THE WORRIER

Take yesterday's worries and sort them all out. And you'll wonder whatever you worried about.

Look back at the cares which once furrowed your brow; I fancy you'll smile at the most of them now.

They seemed terrible then, but they are forgotten.

Look over the list of the blunders you've made.

The debts you've accrued and eventually paid.

They frightened you once, and you thought at the time.

That out of the valley you never would climb.

But you did, and you're living and still going strong.

In spite of the troubles which happened along.

But I'm for the worrier! I'm for the man.

Who, when he's in trouble does all that he can;

I'm for the fellow who puts up a fight.

To straighten things out and to make them go right.

And I say for his comfort when matters seem bad,

To-morrow he'll smile at the troubles he's had.

The Left Hand Columnist of the Lethbridge Herald recalls this one:

When R.C.M.P. Sergeant Smith was stationed at Twin Lakes (near Cardston), presented him with twins. He was discussing the matter rather gloomily with the matron of Galt hospital. "Well, what did you expect?" asked the matron. "Just your average Twin Lakes?" Just as she finished speaking, a man sitting waiting in a chair nearby, fell from his chair in a dead faint. "Who is he?" inquired the matron of the nurse who rushed to the rescue. "I don't know his name," said the nurse, "but he came to see how his wife is getting along. He is from Seven Persons."

Sweet-Grass, the Lone Warrior

What the great Chief Crowfoot was to the Blackfoot was Sweet-Grass to the Crees. He was the Seneca of this great tribe; that was why he was Sweet-Grass.

At the beginning he was next to nothing; a wee mite of a copper-colored pagan Cree. His father had been too indifferent to even fight well, so he had been slain like an obese buffalo bull.

In the hunt there was no warrior to kill the buffalo for the widow's wigwam. She followed up the others, and gleaned what they left. In times of plenty this was not so difficult; but when hunger stalked through the flapping tepees of the Indians in the winter months the gleaming was nothing, and existence for the squaw and her little brown papaws became a struggle with the coyote-like dogs of the camp for the things the others threw away.

That was the childhood of Sweet-Grass. He did not even own a name—he was only the Nukum's child; nobody had time to even dream a name for him.

If in the scramble for bits of jerked buffalo he and the dogs fell out, and he struck the canine rivals, somebody would retaliate—the dogs were in the right of it; it was only the Nukum's child, anyway. The dogs belonged to somebody, after a fashion—so many to each tepee; but Sweet-Grass was only the Nukum's child.

His mother carried wood and smoked meat for the others; stripped the red willow and made kinnikinnick for lazy braves with lazier wives and in return she was allowed to poke through the offal and find her living there—if she could. She was like the village poor woman, with the usual boy, who scrubs and washes and does all the village chores.

Sweet-Grass was the boy. As soon as he opened his eyes on the pleasant world he began to discover that life was a fight.

At 14 he said to the Nukum: "Mother, I am now a warrior. I have not even a name. As I lie on my buffalo skin at night the wind whispers to me through the grass and the purple mosses flowers and asks me what is my name. What can I answer, mother?"

"I answer that I am the Nukum's child; and the wind laughs and sweeps away, and the pack dogs howl and my heart grows black with anger. If it were a maiden the water would trickle from my eyes, my heart grows so sad. But I am a warrior, mother, a brave! and my heart beats hard and fast against my ribs, and I know that it is knocking that it may grow—grow big, and strong, and fierce, like Black Wolves."

"Yesterday a big black eagle flew over the snow mountains, and his shadow swept like a cloud across the grass that is like the yellow gold. He flew toward the sun, mother—south toward the land of the Blackfoot, and he called to me. I looked up and I saw his eyes—they were bright and fierce, just like Black Wolves."

"But he was looking at me, mother, and he whistled shrill and sharp, as though the Great Spirit called me to follow."

"Tonight I am going, mother. In five nights if I do not return it will not matter, for I have no name. I will bring a name if I come back." The Nukum's eyes were old and blurred, the pupil was glazed with a bluish cast, and the whites were streaked yellow and red, so not much expression could creep into them. They did not tell what she thought—they were like badly colored beads. Her tongue did not know how to give expression to sentiment; her poor old heart tugged and strained at its lashings, and hurt her, but she was used to pain. It never occurred to her to complain because of pain.

So the boy looked in the poor, gnarled eyes and saw nothing. The white withered lips told him nothing, and he thought "the Nukum is glad—she would like her boy to have a name." He took his bow and his knife and his tenderly feathered arrows and held them in his arms as a lover fondles the roses he takes to his lady love. It was a man's bow, for the boy's arms were like steel—got of the fighting with the dogs and everything else in the camp.

Cheap little bits of finery he toggled himself out with; trifles of brass tied in his long, black hair; a little remnant of bead work, blue and yellow and black, that his mother had saved from the deer skin shirt of his worthless father, he fastened about his neck.

When he was ready to start the Nukum made his young heart bound with delight when she handed him a pair of delicately beaded moccasins; they had been worked for a young chief.

"For when you are coming back," she said.

Then the sky swallowed him up. The Nukum saw only millions of stars blinking at her as she sat in the rent of her battered old tepee, and looked toward the land of the Blackfoot.

Thus ended the childhood of Sweet-Grass.

The chinook wind blew through the feathers of the boy's arrows and rubbed against his cheek. How light his heart was! For fourteen years he had fought for existence without a name; in a few days he would come back again with one, and wearing the beautiful moccasins now tied up in the little pack on his back.

He reached up his hand and patted them affectionately. As he did so he came to earth with a smash that shook his body—he had put his foot in a badger hole.

As he rose he chided the rose-pink flowers which hid the hole. They were the badger hole sentinel—the cleome.

"Why did you not tell me, little brother?" he said as he tore them up by the roots reproachfully. "They could not tell me because I had no name, I suppose," he muttered, as he sped on again.

The thought stopped him—he turned and looked back to the crushed blossoms: "When I come again this way you will know my name."

All night he travelled, his feet crushing eagerly through the bunch grass and the silvered wolf willow; the long, purple-tipped wild pea caught at his legs and creased them gently. The galliard and the daisies stared sleepily at him as he passed like a gray shadow.

When the light began to steal up in the east he crawled down into a cool and hid himself like a coyote and slept.

That night he travelled again. Across the shallow "Battle River" and the shallower "Nose Creek"; before morning he knew that he was close to Scouting Lake, and closer still to the Blackfoot campment he had been travelling toward.

In a little bluff of white poplar he hid and waited for the coming of day—the day that was to give him a name, or see his scalp hang drying in the tepees of some Blackfoot.

Close to where he crouched the Indians' ponies were herding. How his heart throbbed with exultation as he watched them passing in and out among each other as they fed.

As the gray light began to turn the dark brown of the earth to a gray, his eyes singled out the leader of the herd, a heavy-quartered chestnut. Beyond the horses, a quarter of a mile away, were the Blackfoot tepees, cutting the bright horizon like the jagged teeth of a saw.

Like a general he waited, and struck his bow taut, as a musician keys up his harp.

"They will come to the horses," he thought, "some of them, for I must have scalps as well as ponies."

His heart grew warm as he thought of what it meant for the Nukum. With a name as a brave he would be able to take part in the hunt and a share of the buffalo would fall to the lot of his mother. She would always have plenty to eat.

Something gorgeous caught his eye as a medicine man in all the splendor of his barbaric splendor. Eagle feathers, paint, bead work and charms seemed to have been poured upon his tall figure like fruit from a cornucopia.

He was coming straight toward the boy—coming to confront with the Great Spirit in whose was evident his private prayer ground.

On a gray willow bush, forty yards from where the boy crouched, three pieces of red cloth hung limp in the morning sunlight. It was one of the medicine man's propitiatory offerings.

Behind the medicine man stalked a brave.

"He is coming to round up the horses," thought the boy.

He took an arrow from his quiver, held it up toward the east, and let the sunlight kiss its V-shaped head. Then he placed it to his heart. That was that it might go with unerring aim to the heart of the medicine man.

The boy knelt reverently and kissed the earth.

The steel-nerved arrow drew the bowstring until the arrow-head came back against the hand that grasped the bow.

The medicine man was standing in front of his red-streaked bush, his lips muttering in incantation to the particular spirit he was having dealings with. His broad chest, thrust well out, seemed to invite the death-shaft.

"For mother's sake," hissed the boy; and "twang!" went the stretched sinew string. The jagged iron head of the arrow tore a ghastly hole just where a streak of yellow beads cut through a body ground of blue, almost in the centre of the strong chest of the Blackfoot priest.

Never a sound he gave—only a little hoarse gurgle as he fell forward in a crumpled heap, and writhed over on his back, where he lay, staring up at the smiling sky.

The boy's brain surged hot with a blood-like fury. He rushed from his concealment and pulled the feather of another arrow to his ear as the dead Blackfoot's companion faced him.

It too, found a mark, but only through the shoulder, and too eager for further combat of this sort, he and the brave drew their knives and closed in upon each other.

But the devil was in the boy—he had been bloodied; while the other man had an arrow in his shoulder, which is not so good as an incentive to fight.

and raced for the horses as an answering cry came back from among the blue columns of curling smoke.

In his pack was a little woven horse-halter. He pulled it out as he ran. He had lived among the ponies and dogs in his own camp—their ways were his ways.

Two or three of the ponies were hobbled as sheet anchors to keep the others steady. He tore the hobbles off—from the chestnut stallion last; then grasping the strong mane, he swung himself onto the eager back and stated the herd.

The Blackfoot warriors were running from their tepees, but the Cree laughed in victorious glee.

Round the herd of ponies he dashed on the chestnut with a wild yell, and when they were fairly stampeded he swung into the lead.

As he ran, he heard the grass-knit turf until it gave forth a sound like the roar of many drums.

A shower of arrows came hurtling after him. A few of the Blackfoot had muzzle-loading guns. A little puff of smoke here and there among his pursuers, a thy cloud of white dust, rushed up to one side, or in front of him, told of the useless shots.

They were pursuing him on foot—they had no choice, for he had all their horses.

As he rapidly drew away he uttered one more shrill note of triumph. Then he sat down on the steamed and rode with judgment—stalled him up a bit.

All that day, and all the next night he rode, resting his hand of horses after he had rounded the Battle River, or the first evening.

At daybreak on the second day he sighted his own camp.

The appearance of so many horses in the distance excited the Crees; they thought their old enemy, the Blackfoot, had swooped down upon them.

When the boy rode into the camp at the head of his footsore troop of horses, the warriors swarmed about him.

Modestly he told his story, for the long ride had quieted down his spirits.

He showed them his scalps and his band of loot.

The braves pressed about him closely, and felt his arms and his legs to see where the strength had come.

Suddenly there was a commotion. An opening was made in the crowd, and the Nukum pressed forward to the feet of the tribe's idol.

"My boy, my boy!" she stopped short; her eyes caught sight of the blood on his breast.

"Are you wounded?" She thrust her hand in at the opening of his deer skin shirt and drew it back, clutching a mass of blood-stained grass.

"No," replied the boy; "that's Blackfoot blood, Nukum."

"It's sweet grass," she cried, exultingly, holding the well-known grass aloft in her hand.

Contagiously the others took up the cry. "Sweet grass! Sweet grass!"

As by inspiration the tribe medicine man stepped forward and said: "He is a brave now. He must have a name. Let his name be Sweet-Grass."

Thus was the naming of the great chief, Sweet-Grass.

That was the beginning. Sweet-Grass had graduated from his dog's life. The braves that had been mere as nothing to what Sweet-Grass became.

He stole horses until the medicine man classed him as the greatest pagan of them all.

While he reduced the census of his neighbors, his own tribe waxed populous and rich through his wisdom.

Then came the day when he was chosen chief; and even as he had been the greatest warrior, so he became the greatest chief the tribe had ever known.

And the husks had all passed away from the Nukum, for Sweet-Grass honored her in his poverty even as she had helped and saved for him when they fought with the dogs for the scraps.

way southward through the Blackfoot country one morning in May.

He came upon a small party of Blackfoot. With them they had a captive—a Cree maiden.

Practical Christianity was part of the father's creed, and he determined to rescue the girl if he had to pawn his Red River coat to the Indians.

"Camp here," he said to them; for a bargain with Indians is like a Chinese play—it will end only when there is nothing more to be said on either side.

So they encamped where they were, among the spring flowers, and smoked the pipe of peace and bargained for the girl.

The priest meant to have her free at any cost, but it was also legitimate to get her cheaply. In the end he gave an order on the Hudson's Bay Company for a sum sufficient to bankrupt his small means.

He took the girl with him on his southern trip, for there was no way of sending her to her people till he should return in the autumn.

It had been the usual order of Blackfoot enterprise; the war party to be sent down upon the Crees. Crees she had been with at the time, and killed them all but herself. Her parents had not been of the party. In October Father Lacombe went north again—back among the Crees.

One evening, after he had camped, he saw a great outflow of Indians trailing towards him. He hid the girl under a cart, the sides of which were draped by canvas.

It was Sweet-Grass' party. They encamped beside the father for the night.

To Father Lacombe the Indians were as children; to him their lives were an open book, and the misery that was in one old couple's hearts was soon poured into his sympathetic ear.

As to an Indian there is no loss so great as the loss of a loved one; horses are less to be lamented.

And many herbs had lost a daughter; the Blackfoot had attacked the party she was with in the spring and all had been killed, even the daughter.

Father Lacombe had opened up a gold mine, and he knew it. The priest had several gifts besides his great generosity and his wide humanity. He had that fine dramatic instinct which makes the most of an opportunity. Evidently God had delivered the captive into his hands; that good night some of the evil which had been done.

That was the priest's way—profit for his Master. Another would have calculated how many furs the girl would exchange for.

When the father spoke of hope, Many Herbs scoffed. Alive, there might be hope, yes! But was not Two Winds dead? Could the priest take a stripped wand of the red willow and change it into the form of Two Winds and alive?

Was not Sweet-Grass also like a stricken buffalo? Two Winds was to have gone to the chief's lodge even at that time—at the time of the great hunts.

"Surely," thought the priest, "the Father has given these people into my hands." If Sweet-Grass also loved the maid much good must come of the rescue.

Then he spoke aloud to the Crees and prayed silently in his heart the while. Eloquently he told in the short, terse sentences of the Indian, the infinite power and mercy of the Lord. That if they would only listen it would heal the arrow wounds in their hearts.

"Will your God, who is so powerful, give me back Two Winds?" cried Many Herbs. "Or bring her back to my lodge?" asked Sweet-Grass.

"Have patience, my brothers," said the priest. "You have forgotten one thing—you have forgotten the power of this!" and he held aloft the black cross which was tucked in his shirt.

The light from the aspen campfire flickered against the brass image of the Saviour drooping from the cruel, holding nails.

Surely the light of his mission was in the gray eyes of the black-socked man, who drew himself up to his full height and held the figure toward the Indians with a commanding supplication.

It was Sweet-Grass who said: "Call on your Medicine to give us Two Winds. If it can do that I will believe—I and my tribe. The Little Father shall have five horses if he can do this thing, I have spoken."

The chief and the priest were old friends—almost old antagonists on the question. Pere Lacombe knew that Sweet-Grass' words were like the flow of the Saskatchewan—a thing to be depended upon.

"And I have heard," he said, as the Cree chief ceased speaking and placed the long stem of his pipe between his lips, "have heard, and my Master has heard, and the power of the cross is for good."

Among the whites Pere Lacombe was the one man Sweet-Grass trusted; and as the priest spoke he started forward eagerly, in a half-famished way, as a gaunt wolf eyes a life that is just out of his reach.

"Two Winds," he whispered, huskily, expectantly. "Yes!" answered the priest, in his deep voice, as he drew aside the canvas.

It was as though God had looked down and smiled upon the camp as Two Winds came and stood in the light of the camp-fire; the same light that had flicked at the brass Saviour streaked with bronze the black mass of her hair, and showed the great love-light in the sparkling eyes.

Pere Lacombe stood a little to one side, with bowed head, his hands crossed lovingly over the brass Saviour, as he held it against his breast. The power of the cross had come to pass.

Mrs. Antoine Morsau, Lafontaine, Ont., writes: "For many years I had been a sufferer from bad kidneys. They were so weak I could not retain the secretions, and my back would be lame and give me a lot of distress."

I doctored, but the only medicine that gave me any help was Doan's Kidney Pills. They have strengthened my kidneys and put them in better condition than they have been for many years."

BITTERN LAKE WINS CLOSE DEBATE FROM LONE RIDGE

On Thursday evening the Lone Ridge debating team visited Bittern Lake in the return debate. Subject: "Resolved that the co-operative movement has not been a success. Lone Ridge upheld the negative and won the debate by a close margin.

The Lone Ridge supporters praised the elements and accompanied the team. It might be added that a little more co-operation in finding the hall would have been appreciated as some of our debaters found the hall in the outskirts of Canmore, having missed the hall on route. Possibly, however, the "guide" felt like having a nice trip into the country. Luckily he had plenty of gasoline along.

In the absence of one of the opponents, a gentleman from the audience kindly officiated, together with Messrs. W. H. Odell and C. H. Russell of Wetaskiwin. The next debate versus Hillsdale local, will take place at Lone Ridge on February 13th. Subject: "Resolved that a reciprocity agreement with the U.S.A. would be an advantage to Canada." It is hoped to put on a short program and to follow with an impromptu dance. Further announcements will be made.

The regular monthly meeting was held on Tuesday, January 12th, at Lone Ridge hall at 2 p.m. It had been felt that meeting in the afternoon would be more popular than in the evening for winter months. The attendance at the meeting however, was so disappointing that it was resolved to go back to the evening meetings for the future. Considerable discussion took place on the alternative marketing scheme proposed by the Wheat Pool, and much useful information was given. A delegate to the U.F.A. convention in Edmonton was appointed. Place of next meeting was left open and an announcement will be made at a later date.

Western farmers were not adequately represented in the Dominion House and urged the executive to get in touch with other farm bodies with a view to formulating a policy on which a united group could be elected at the next Dominion election.

A proposal looking to a fixed price on wheat consumed in Canada was turned down. The resolution said prices fixed in Canada and enhanced by the tariff and wheat consumed in world competition.

Increasing the income tax so as to provide a much larger proportion of the revenue of Canada was advocated and any reduction in the taxes on larger incomes was opposed.

oral. The office she held will be abolished.

Abolition was necessitated by the government's economy program, in which every possible source of expenditure is being carefully studied, Mr. Lyburn said.

Mrs. Jamieson's retirement leaves only one woman magistrate in Canada, the resignation of Mrs. Emily Murphy of Edmonton, known as "Jenny Canuck," having been accepted several months ago. Dr. Margaret Patterson of Toronto, is the only one of the dominion's three women jurists who has remained in office.

U.F.A. DELEGATES OPPOSE BONUS AS OFFSET FOR DUTY

Edmonton, Jan. 19.—Alberta farmers want no bonus on farm products. They stick to the free trade principles and they are prepared to pay the duty on their goods rather than ask the Dominion Government for assistance comparable to what they believe the manufacturers receive from the tariff. So they decided at their annual convention this afternoon.

There was not an unanimous decision, however, for first of all the convention passed a resolution asking that the present bonus of five cents a bushel on wheat be extended to agricultural production generally and in proportion to the benefits enjoyed by manufacturers through the tariff.

Then, in a sudden about-face decision on a word from one of their representatives in the federal parliament, E. J. Garland, member for Bow River, supported by the views of the leader of the U.F.A. group and president of the association, Robert Gardiner, member for Alberta, they recalled the bonus resolution and threw it out by an overwhelming vote.

One resolution dealing with the bonus still stands with the approval of the convention. That declares the present wheat bonus was intended as a relief measure and falls in its purpose in that it does not benefit farmers who had no crop. It recommends a change to compensate all grain growers to a minimum of at least 10 an acre seeded.

Speakers on the question, however, insisted this was not a departure from the principles of the organization since the farmers had not asked for this bonus and it was given as a special relief measure.

Another argument advanced in favor of the bonus was the Canadian wheat in the mouth until nature moves them by the natural process, because not only are they used for chewing, but they also hold the space required or the permanent teeth.

Decayed temporary teeth are very apt to injure the permanent teeth which replace them. If they are infected, they may poison and so injure the body. The child who has never chewed his food properly, and, as a result, he will suffer in his nutrition.

The first permanent teeth—four in number—appear about the sixth year and are known as the six-year molars. They should not be confused with the temporary teeth and must be given special care, because if they are lost, they are lost forever. These teeth hold the other teeth in position while the temporary teeth are being replaced by the permanent. The loss of a six-year molar leads to irregularity of the teeth in that quarter of the jaw where the loss occurs.

The foundation for strong, healthy teeth is a proper diet, a diet which provides the material out of which such teeth can be built. Milk, whole-grain cereals, green vegetables and fruits, used regularly, will do this. Sunlight in summer and cod liver oil in winter furnish the vitamin which is needed for building healthy bones and teeth.

The gums and teeth need exercise as much as do other parts of the body. Crunches and fibrous vegetables supply the exercise required.

The teeth should be kept clean by regular brushing, night and morning. Regular visits to the dentist will permit of the early detection of small decayed spots, which, if cared for immediately, will prevent any serious damage.

Begin early, and help your child to keep his teeth throughout life. Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Health Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

SUPPLEMENTARY FEEDS FOR THE BROOD SOW

(Experimental Farms Note)

An important consideration in the care of the brood sow is the feed. When the sows are bred for fall litters and pastured during the summer, feeding is much simplified because there is a constantly available supply of green feed, protein and mineral matter, the essential elements for a proper development of the young pigs. In formulating rations for winter feeding of the brood sow it is well to remember that at this season of the year she will not have the run of a green pasture and access to minerals in the soil to help balance her ration, and unless the ration is well balanced for her the resultant litter may be weak, flabby, undersized weanlings.

Swine, and particularly pregnant brood sows are apt to suffer from lack of protein and minerals in their feed, more, perhaps, than any other kind of farm animals. One reason for this is that in producing two litters of pigs per year a great demand is made upon the protein and mineral supply of the mother's body. The cereal grains which form the basic ration for brood sows are deficient in both protein and mineral matter. This deficiency can, however, be remedied by supplying supplementary feeds and mixtures rich in the essential elements.

The practice followed at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, is to supply the in-pig sow with a winter ration, balanced by the use of such supplementary feeds as buttermilk or skim-milk, tankage, cod, cod liver oil, alfalfa hay or meal. If buttermilk or skim-milk is not available, tankage is added to the meal ration at the rate of 3 to 5 pounds per 100 pounds of meal mixture. A meal ration found satisfactory for pregnant sows is composed of 4 parts ground oats, one part ground barley or ground wheat and one part bran. Roots when available make a desirable addition to the ration as they provide bulk and succulence. A mineral mixture to which the sows have free access from a box or self-feeder made up of dissolved coal 76 pounds; salt 23 pounds, air-slaked lime or ground limestone 3 pounds and sulphur one pound.

As a measure to prevent goitre in the young pigs, potassium iodide is given the brood sows in the following manner: One ounce of potassium iodide is dissolved in one gallon of water, and one tablespoonful of the liquid per sow is added to the drinking water once per day.

RETENTION OF CO-OPERATIVES U.F.A. POLICY

Edmonton, Jan. 20.—Retention of business organizations started by the United Farmers within the United Farmers' organization is one of the future co-operative policies to be carried out by the organization, he declared Norman Macdonald, vice president, U.F.A., in submitting the annual report of the board of directors to the annual convention at First Presbyterian church, on Tuesday.

"We are keenly conscious of the fact that the necessary warfare of various co-operative bodies is totally independent of each other, is ineffective against the concentrated power of the capitalistic enterprise," he said. "We, therefore, conclude that it is in the best interest of the co-operative movement as a whole, that with respect to future co-operative business, the power to unify and coordinate those efforts shall be kept within the parent body."

Continuing, Mr. Priestly said: "As a board elected by the United Farmers of this province to direct the efforts that are now in progress to effect our emancipation as agriculturists will be achieved by uniting effort along political as well as economic lines."

Dealing with the organization's financial standing, Mr. Priestly said that by the end of the year the U.F.A. was in possession of a substantial surplus, built up during the years immediately previous. Since that time, however, with the exception of the election year in 1930, this surplus had been heavily drawn upon until "we are now in the position of being able to function only as the funds are contributed by the membership."

Mr. Priestly, on behalf of the board, complimented the organization's political representatives both at Ottawa and Edmonton. They were faced with strong opposition, but in spite of all they continued their fight for their rights.

"The efforts of the U.F.A. movement toward public ownership and also toward co-operative enterprise are two different roads travelled toward the same ultimate goal."

Hosts will make as many preparations as possible ahead of time so that the meal will seem to almost get themselves.

Breakfast, with guests, is usually a leisurely meal. Any woman is willing to linger over the eating, but wishes to hurry with the preparation. Some of the aids on the pantry shelf will be ready-to-eat cereals, small jars of jam and marmalade, mixed seasonings and a mixture of cocoa and sugar. The mixed seasonings are a great convenience to have ready for hash, cheese dishes, omelets, etc. Blend together 1 cup of salt, one-quarter cup mustard, one-quarter cup paprika and a little cayenne. Put into a can glass jar and only have one container to open instead of three when seasonings are needed.

For making the children's cocoa have a quart jar containing a mixture of two cups cocoa, one cup sugar and one-fourth cup flour. To prepare one serving boil one or two tablespoons of the mixture (depending on desired strength) with one-half cup water and add three-quarters cup of milk.

The refrigerator plays an important part in advance preparation for breakfast with guests. The fruit will be chilling; the butter is there, cut up into individual servings; muffins, griddle cakes, or waffle batter (closely covered) is there ready to be baked at short notice. Parsley or other greens for garnish are washed, stored, and waiting to be used. There are dozens of ways in which a housekeeper may have first aid in her cooking process.

Bran Crocks

3 tablespoons shortening, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 egg (well beaten), 1 1/2 cups milk, 1 cup bran, 1/2 cup corn meal, 1 1/2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder.

COMMUNICATION

[We do not necessarily endorse the sentiments advanced by this or any other correspondent under this heading.—Ed.]

Dear Mr. Editor: The last issue of your esteemed paper contained a report of the proceedings of the recent Board of Trade meeting, which was addressed by Mr. John Blue, secretary of the Edmonton Board of Trade. There is no man more alert and alive to every possibility that might be of advantage to the province and in dealing with the profitable tourist traffic the following paragraph appears in your report:

"Mr. Blue advised the Board not to skip advertising of Wetaskiwin and district as if this is judiciously done, Wetaskiwin as well as Edmonton will get its share of the tourist traffic. Tourists spent $200,000.00 in Canada last year, and with the completion of the Jasper-Banff highway, no doubt hundreds of cars of tourists will pass through here weekly in the height of the season."

Mr. Blue is absolutely right. Any person with ordinary intelligence will agree with him. But what can we say of the intelligence and business foresight of the City Council of 1931 sitting idly by as sleep at the switch and allowed Wetaskiwin to be sidetracked by permitting and agreeing to the main highway between Calgary and Edmonton being built outside of the city and thus lose to Wetaskiwin its share of the tremendous tourist traffic to which Mr. Blue referred. What must have been the feelings of those at the meeting when they remembered that for a mere mess of pottage, the saving of a small yearly contribution from the city, our city fathers sold out our interests apparently absolutely indifferent to the value of the tourist traffic as outlined by Mr. Blue. It just shows the need of having a Mayor and Council who are wide awake every minute and ready to take advantage of everything that will be beneficial to the City.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space in order to call to the attention of the public the great danger of the city being in the hands of a moribund Council and hoping that for the future a real live Council will be in charge of our affairs so that such a colossal blunder will never again occur.

Yours for saner and wiser administration.

A. RIPPIN.

FAST HOCKEY GAME TO BE PLAYED HERE SATURDAY

The Killam hockey team, heralded as champions of the East line, will play the Wetaskiwin hockey league team at the rink here on Saturday afternoon of this week, at 3 o'clock. This announcement is of particular interest to the many devotees of winter sport resident in the surrounding country, who are fortunate in being presented with this opportunity of witnessing a speedy game while in the city on their week-end shopping trips.

PONOKA JUNIORS BEAT WETASKIWIN IN LEAGUE FIXTURE

Ponoka, Jan. 19.—Ponoka juniors defeated Wetaskiwin intermediates 5-3 in a scheduled league game played here Monday.

Ponoka started in to play real hockey and piled up three counters in the first period while holding Wetaskiwin scoreless.

M. MacMillan scored the first goal on a nice pass from R. Morgan. V. Lux banged the rubber into the net for Ponoka's second goal on a well-timed pass from Strauss. R. Plant banged in the third counter on a shot that hit the upper corner of the net.

In the second period Ponoka again started the scoring when E. Larsen made a nice goal on a solo rush. In this period Wetaskiwin also scored. O'Neill getting their first counter on a pass from Farewell. J. Watson scored Wetaskiwin's second goal on a solo effort.

In the final period R. Morgan got the fifth goal for Ponoka on a pass from Strauss. Abousaffy got Wetaskiwin's final goal when he rifled in a long shot from outside the blue line when Kyle's view was obstructed by a team-mate.

WETASKIWIN LOSES TO LEDUC IN TRIANGULAR LEAGUE GAME

The best hockey game on Wetaskiwin ice this season took place Thursday evening, it being the third encounter played here in the triangular league with Leduc as visitors. Both teams were determined to win, the visitors being out to retain their position as league leaders. The game was fast from the first drop of the puck, and there was little to choose from. Both teams were evenly matched, although the Wetaskiwin boys had a little better of the play, but were unable to find the net.

Only three tallies were made, two being made by Leduc, and all goals were made by long shots. One counter was made by Robertson, who shot a long one from near the Leduc goal, which went over the lights into the darkness and was not seen by any of the players until it landed behind the Wetaskiwin goalie. Ego scored the other counter for Leduc and Jim Watson made Wetaskiwin's only tally. The only penalties handed out were to Robertson of Leduc and J. Watson of Wetaskiwin. The score at the end of the first period was even, each team having one break goal in the second, and the third period was scoreless. The eagle eye of Waddy Somers, the referee, caught all off-sides, and he kept the game well in hand. The players were:

Leduc: Woods; Ego; Robertson; J. Maduk; Mullen; Bonin; P. Maduk; Kordybacha; Kowal; Loomis.

Wetaskiwin: Tagtmeyer; J. Watson; Neil; Aicher; A. Abousaffy; Morner; Farewell; Greiner; Watson.

WETASKIWIN LADIES WIN FROM EDMONTON RINKS

Two rinks of Edmonton lady curlers came down Saturday afternoon for friendly games with the Wetaskiwin club. One rink, skipped by Mrs. Kent, and representing the Soona club, played Mrs. Wright, and the other rink, skipped by Mrs. Trewhilliger, representing the Royal, played Mrs. Kelley. The ice was very keen, and the games were very closely contested. Ten ends were played and the Wetaskiwin club won in the aggregate.

The scores were:

Soona, 7; Mrs. Wright, 9.

Royal, 6; Mrs. Kelley, 8.

The players were: Soona—Mrs. Kent, skip; Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Williams.

Mrs. Wright, skip; Mrs. Manley, Mrs. Miquelon, Mrs. Burkholder.

Royal: Mrs. Trewhilliger, skip; Mrs. Conn, Mrs. Deaton, Mrs. Michaels.

Mrs. Kelley, skip; Mrs. Wiseman, Miss Switzer, Miss Thraler.

After the game, the visitors were entertained at tea by the Wetaskiwin Club.

WETASKIWIN DEFEATS CAMROSE FLIERS IN CAMROSE

The Wetaskiwin hockey team played one of the best games this season on Saturday evening, when they went to Camrose and played an exhibition game with the Camrose Flies. Clean, fast hockey was played throughout, and at the end of full time, the score was a tie, 1-1. In the overtime, Jim Watson scored a counter which won the game for his team. Jim also made the counter which tied the score. Although the most friendly feeling prevailed throughout the entire encounter, Tagtmeyer, the Wetaskiwin goalie, had the misfortune to receive a cut on the lip, which required three stitches. Neil received a nasty blow on the cheek from an opponent's stick, and Abe Abousaffy is displaying a much discolored optic.

COUNTY SYSTEM FOR ALBERTA

A much discussed question of the moment is the advisability of establishing the county system in Alberta. There is no doubt that much of could be done quite as satisfactorily by the county councils, and this should result in a great reduction of expense to the provincial legislature. But it has been found in the sparsely-settled areas of the States that the county system merely multiplies offices and officers. The idea of the centralized government at Edmonton attending to county council duties from afar, appeals to many as being fairer to all, less personal and local. However, those with a background of Eastern Canadian experience, are somewhat inclined to the county system. It would unite many municipalities in programmes which concern all. Certain public works could be instituted within the area without burdening legislatures. Eastern experience has demonstrated that county councillors are elected as a rule carefully, that they recognize a considerable responsibility toward their country, and serve capably in developing the activities and industries of their unit of the province. Each county carries an individuality, and is noteworthy perhaps for roads, or for industries supplementary to agriculture or for rural school advancement, recreation grounds, scenic programmes and so on. Most individuals take great pride in promoting the standing and development of their particular county.

The municipalities of Alberta are much more restricted in authority with any great individuality. If a justifiable saving at Edmonton could be effected by establishing counties in Alberta, it would seem worth while. A great part of the country falls naturally into areas where the same interests and type of industry prevail. These areas containing municipal districts and operating as counties could remove a great responsibility from Edmonton, and could develop a progressive individuality, devoted to the dominant interests of the "county" to be served.

WHICH STORES DO YOU LIKE BEST?

ISN'T IT TRUE that stores which invite your custom oftenest, and which give you most information about their offerings, are those to which you go by preference?

ISN'T IT TRUE that silent or dumb stores---stores which never tell you that your custom is wanted and valued, and which never send you information about their stocks and prices, are less favored by you than are stores which inform you by advertisements in this newspaper about themselves, their stocks, their prices?

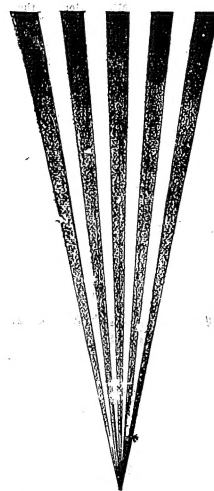

ISN'T IT TRUE that you want, before you go shopping, information about goods of desire, which are obtainable locally, and about where they can be obtained?

THE FACT IS that advertisements are a form or kind of news, and careful buyers want the kind of news which sellers provide just as much as they want the news which it is the business of this newspaper to provide.

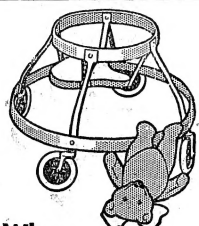

IT IS ADVANTAGEOUS to you, regarded as a purchaser, to be "advertisement conscious," meaning, to be observant of advertisements, and to be readers of them when seen in your local newspaper.

The reading of the advertisements appearing in this newspaper week by week not only will save you time, by telling you what and where to buy; but also they will direct you to "all alive" stores, providing goods which have been carefully selected and competitively priced.

Always remember this: the stores that serve you best are the stores that tell you most!

SECTION 236 AGAINST RAFFLES

The editor has had many requests lately to publish items relating to raffles which were being held throughout the district, and has also been criticized for not doing so, or changing items somewhat. The following, cut from the "New Outlook," is worth our critics' perusal:

Dear Sir:—Information has been received that churches are being circularized regarding a method of raising money, which method is not only questionable but contrary to law. Officers of any club or society, or official board of a church, who act on the advice contained in the circular referred to, will find themselves facing the consequences clearly stated in Section 236 of the Criminal Code.

"Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years' imprisonment and to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, who: (a) Makes, prints, advertises or publishes, or causes or procures to be made, printed, advertised, or published, any proposal, scheme or plan for advancing, lending, giving, selling or in any way disposing of any property by lots, cards, tickets, or any mode of chance whatsoever."

WHEN YOU ARE OLD

when you are old, and I am passed away—
Passed, and your face, your golden hair, is gray—
I think, what'er the end, this dream of mine
Comforting you, a friendly star will shine
Down the dim slopes where still you stumble and stray.
So may it be that: so dead Yesterday,
No sad-eyed ghost, but generous and gay
May serve your memories like a mighty wine.
When you are old,
Dear Heart, it shall be so. Under the sway
Of death the past's enormous disarray
Lies hushed and dark. Yet though there come no sign
Live on well pleased: immortal and divine
Love shall still tend you as God's angels may,
When you are old.

OLDTIMERS RALLY AT EDMONTON FOR ANNUAL ROUNDUP

Edmonton, Jan. 15.—Wednesday night was old-timers' night in Edmonton, an occasion of music, dancing, happy reunions and gay camaraderie, and the 1932 annual celebration at the Macdonald rivalled, if it did not surpass, all former annual gatherings, both in attendance and brilliancy of entertainment.

Orchestras played in the Gold Dining Room, the Confederation Room and the Palm Room, where people from all parts of the province were gathered about the dinner tables.

At the head table with the president, Mr. J. J. Duggan, who acted as host, were those prominent in official and parliamentary circles and in the church. Notable among the guests of honor were the Calgary visitors, Mr. John Irwin, M.L.A., and the Mayor of Calgary and Mrs. Andrew Davidson.

JUST THE SAME

Same old programme!—eat and run. Work and worry, not much fun, Scrimping hard for coal and rent, Wondering where the money went.

Same old bores who talk to me! When I want to talk, you see! Please remit to make me blue As it always used to do:

Every day the need for pluck: Now and then a bit of luck; Same old world in same old state— Nothing new except the date!

Dull Aches Around Heart

Mrs. J. Wilson, 54 Park St., Brockville, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from severe, dull aches around my heart, and also had very bad dizzy and fainting spells. My case became serious, so much so, I could not stay alone. My mother got me a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking two boxes I have not been bothered since." Sold at all drug and general stores, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Here's a Little Story for Retailers

A YOUNG tailor complained bitterly about his poor business. "I make just as good clothes as 's do," he said, "and I sell them for less, yet ————s get most of the business of this district."

This young tailor felt that men ought to find all about him—that they should search him out. He didn't see that it was his job to make known to all men the fact that he made good clothes and sold them at attractive prices. ————s, on the other hand, advertised their business, and, of course, men went to them for their clothes.

It's the same all the world over—buyers go where they are invited to go. They buy, in largest numbers, from those who give them information about their business, service, goods, prices. This is exactly as it should be.

Why shouldn't the most aggressive seller get most business?

The world likes to buy from keen sellers—from retailers who pay them the compliment of telling them about what they have to sell and about their desire for their custom.

Dumb retailers may be fine men, may give good values, may be first-class store keepers, but the buying public prefers to go where advertisements in their newspapers direct them to go.

The wise retailer runs his business in line with what buyers want, because it is profitable to do so.

It costs a retailer far more NOT to advertise than to advertise.

Bible school for the training of young people to be Sunday school teachers, Church workers, and efficient representatives of the ideals for which the Kingdom of God stands in the world. The Bible Institute building is used as a dormitory for some of the students, while others are entertained in the homes of Wetaskiwin. The class sessions are held in the Baptist church on Alberta street.According to latest reports a total of 64 young people are enrolled from this section of Alberta. They come from Olds, Trochu, Forestburg, Camrose, Prudential, Wessington, Leduc, Edmonton, Glory Hill, and some are from Wetaskiwin and vicinity. It is the largest enrollment the school has ever had.The school began on January 4th, and the closing celebration will take place on Friday afternoon, January 29th. More specific information with reference to that will be given next week.Rev. E. P. Wahl of Trochu, is the Dean of the school. Rev. Arthur A.
Schade, Field Secretary of the Young People's and Sunday School Workers' Union of the German Baptists of North America, and Professor-elect of the College-Rochester Divinity School at Rochester, N.Y., is teaching three courses, one of Training
Young People for Christian Service, another on the application of pedagogical principles to the field of religious instruction, and a third on the Gospel according to Mark.Rev. E. P. Wahl is treating the devotional life as reflected in the Psalms, and Rev. Fred Benke, pastor of the Baptist Church in Wetaskiwin, is giving a course on Missionary

Times bids this happy and enthusiastic company of young people, who are striving for the better things in life, a hearty welcome. Their presence on the streets and in the shops of this fair city is a pleasant sight.HAIL INSURANCE COMPANIES MAY LEAVE ALBERTARegina, Jan. 17.—Hail insurance companies, operating in Alberta, supported by the United Farmers of Alberta, will seek legislation at the coming session of the Alberta legislature to enable the companies to continue to carry on business in the province.As the result of heavy losses and small premium revenue, four hail insurance companies have already announced their intention of withdrawing entirely from the hail business in the three prairie provinces, according to H. H. Campkin, secretary of the Canadian Hail Underwriters' association.Losses were particularly heavy in proportion to the premium income in Alberta and several of the companies have announced that they will no longer be able to do business in that province unless they are assisted by changes in the hail legislation in Alberta. The Alberta government has indicated its willingness to consider the introduction of legislation to aid the companies.HIS GREAT MISTAKE Judge: "You, a respectable young man, stole a coat. In consequence you have lost your post, and brought trouble and sorrow to your parents."Accused: "Yes, and it was too tight into the bargain."

IN ALL-BRANHas "Bulk" and Vitamin B
for Constipation, and Iron for BloodIn the past ten years millions have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN the safe "cereal way" to overcome common constipation—with the headaches, backaches, loss of appetite and energy, that so often result.
Behind this success is the proved effectiveness of ALL-BRAN. Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two overcomes common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the effectiveness of the intestines. Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also contains twice as much blood-building iron, by weight, as beef liver.The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like the bulk in lettuce. Inside the body it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.How much more pleasant it is to use this delicious cereal than to abuse your system with pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.Just eat two tablespoons daily with milk or cream—sufficient to overcome most types of constipation—in serious cases, with every meal. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.
